XPACS BREAKS BOUNDARIES OF CONCIERGE SERVICE

The premier international concierge agency has expanded its market due to client demand, raised the bar on new membership, and changed its name in the process.

NEWPORT BEACH, California—December 12, 2005—It was only a matter of time that word got out on XPACS. Now that it has, XPACS has experienced a stunning demand from jet-setting corporate executives, entertainment icons, high-profile legal and medical professionals, and other MVPs in their own right. Previously focused on the sports industry, the global concierge service provider possesses the capacity to respond to this diverse and urgent need. And XPACS has responded—becoming Xtreme Personal Assistant Concierge Services.

XPACS has expanded its vision to meet the needs of these extraordinary individuals, who are sophisticated to understand that the preservation of time is an investment, not an expense. XPACS feels strongly about the uncompromised support that it provides its clients and their families, so it does not just offer it to anyone. Clients must now enter the service through recommendations from current clients, or approval from the Board. Prospective clients must also have a net worth (not including their primary home/residence) of $2 million or more.

Don't think that the XPACS philosophy of service has changed in any way, though. XPACS still is and will continue to be the worldwide leader in concierge services, thanks to its energetic concierge network of 300 spread throughout 75 cities around the globe. No matter your request, no matter your location, the XPACS staff can provide the solution any time of day, any day of the week.

What has changed, besides the name, is the XPACS clientele. The kings of the corporate boardroom, the class of the entertainment world, the cream of the legal and medical professions—they realize the value of an international network of personal assistants. These unique individuals requested to be a part of this exclusive network, and the lucky few have already joined. The next time they find themselves and their families in a foreign town, needing help locating a new home or the finest restaurant for dinner—or in their hometown in need of a cutting-edge plasma television—they can reach out to XPACS.

The benefits of the XPACS concierge network are nothing short of priceless. Ask the current members of the exclusive network. That's surely how they will describe the international XPACS team of 300 individuals who are dedicated to their every need, at their disposal whenever and wherever they are needed.
